Barrow Cabins

2010; 2012

Eirik Johnson is a photographer who focuses his artwork on issues involving the environment, economy, and social topics worldwide. The Barrow Cabin series consists of hunting shacks in the Arctic built by indigenous people. The extreme contrast between the Arctic summer and winter shows how drastic seasons can change the surrounding area within months. Continuity is expressed through the changing seasons, highlighting the drastic physical changes that mother nature brings upon the Earth.
